FACTS: Currently, 13% of Greenville’s population is over 65 years old. Within the next 10 years, this demographic segment will more than double to one of every four people in Greenville. Caught in the vise between their fixed, lower incomes and steadily rising costs for rental housing; low-income seniors are facing unsustainable rent burdens, paying ever higher percentages of their meager incomes on housing. This untenable situation causes life-threatening stress and leads to people having to choose between paying rent, eating, or buying medications while also increasing the risk they will be forced onto the streets.
